Nano-Block Technology

Blocking stains through molecular science

Kids make messes, so most likely your boat will eventually succumb to nasty stains unless you're extra careful—or if you have stain-blocking upholstery. The ultimate test for anything that claims to be "stain-blocking" is to unleash children and their imaginations on it—then we'll see who's walking the walk and talking the talk.

CMI Enterprises is doing just that. CMI is the first coated fabrics manufacturer to use Nanotechnology, which is the science of manipulating materials at the atomic and molecular level to develop new or enhanced products.

Nanotechnology isn't exclusive to the marine industry, although it definitely is expected to benefit from it. Nanotechnology will have an impact on nearly every industry. The U.S. National Science Foundation has predicted that the global market for Nanotechnologies will reach $1 trillion or more within 20 years. To give you an appreciation of "nano," which means "a billionth," the smallest particle size used in vinyl is six microns. That equals 6,000 nanometers (or six billionths of a meter).

CMI Enterprises has created Nano-Block Technology and NBT Marine, which represent the next generation of protective coating for your boat's vinyl. NBT Marine blocks the toughest stains like ballpoint pens, permanent markers, mustard and ketchup, if you follow the cleaning instructions. Often it just takes a rag to wipe it clean. Premier is proud to introduce Nano-Block Technology on their upper-end boats this year. Their Nano-Blocking upholstery is backed by an unprecedented seven-year warranty.
